Any attorney's fee motion will be adjudicated in, at most, two stages. First, the issue of entitlement to fees will be decided. If plaintiffs are entitled to fees, the amount will be considered next. This procedure allows the parties to forego filings related to the amount until the threshold issue of entitlement is decided. Any initial moving papers therefore should concern only entitlement. If the parties stipulate that plaintiffs are entitled to fees but do not

1 agree on the amount, they should inform the Court of their stipulation, and request instructions 2 on how to litigate the amount.
